Commentary - Winton CM - October 2022⁽¹⁰⁾

Diversifying non-trend systems led the fund to a positive return in October, despite a small loss for trend-following systems. Carry signals made money in currencies, energies and fixed income, while mean reversion and market dynamics systems were other modest sources of profits.

Currencies was the largest contributor to performance, with short carry and trend following positioning in the Japanese yen producing gains. These profits were pared by losses from short positions in rallying US equity markets, although short exposure to the Hang Seng and FTSE China A50 indices offered some valuable diversification.

An unexpectedly warm October across Europe helped to alleviate some of the price pressure in energy markets. The reduced demand led natural gas prices lower, with the fund profiting from a short position which increased during the month.
