Commentary - Quantica Capital AG - March 2022 ⁽⁹⁾

The Quantica Managed Futures Focus Fund (11C-U share class) returned 3.46% in March 2022, bringing its year-to-date net performance to -1.08%.

On the back of continuously rising inflation in both the US and Europe, March was characterized by a continuation in rising yields across both the front- and the long-end of the yield curve. The Program's short positions in Short-term Interest Rates futures returned 1.7%, while the aggregate net short exposure in global government bonds returned 0.9% in March.

Mainly owing to a significant appreciation of the US dollar against the Japanese yen, the Program's currency futures positions added 1.0% to its month-end performance.

Equities were the only negative driver of performance for March, detracting performance by -0.2%. The initial gains from the Program's overall net short exposure to the asset-class were subsequently more than offset by the strong recovery in global equity markets in the second half of the month.

Risk and notional exposures across asset-classes remained stable over the monthly period, with a net short exposure of -24% to Equities, a net short 10-year duration equivalent exposure of -74% to Fixed Income & Rates, and a moderate net long Dollar exposure of 12%.

Going into April, the Program's risk remains equally split between short equity and short fixed income and rates risk exposures with low-to-moderate long exposure to the US dollar. The current risk allocation is reflective of a market environment characterized by a wide range of strong trends across multiple instruments and asset-classes.
