Investment Strategy

- The InRIS Parus Fund is global long/short equity fund. The Investment Manager seeks to generate absolute returns by targeting on the long side growth stocks with a competitive advantage and on the short side structurally declining companies.
- Alongside these investments, the Fund also takes positions in companies with cyclical, mean-reverting characteristics.
- The Fund employs a stock-picking methodology supported by fundamental analysis and the use of primary data. The Fund focuses on long-term outcome with the objective to make money on each position independently be it long or short.
- Stocks included in the portfolio are the result of a bottom-up selection process, hence the variable net exposure of the Fund has historically been between -20% and 95%.

Commentary - Parus Finance - December 2023 ⁽⁷⁾

Parus Fund was -3.7% in December and -8.5% for 2023 (EUR-H class).

The cost of the short book was very frustrating last year, especially so in November & December. The short book was hit by the short squeeze in Q4 and move lower in rates. The companies with the weakest balance sheets generally saw the largest squeeze and are also the most challenged going forward. Parus has reduced exposure to the Real Estate shorts to manage risk (3rd time last year), while keeping relevant exposure to the sector. The investment process is faced with situations like these from time to time and is used to dealing with risk reductions. Historically they have presented attractive returns for the fund going forward.

After the rally many of the cyclical shorts are now pricing a healthy activity level combined with an easy refinancing environment. This is happening at the same time as the global economy is still declining, US employment data is still deteriorating, and consumer delinquencies are rising at a very fast rate. In other words, for many of those names, the market is now pricing a healthy activity pick up despite fundamentals which remain tough.

In the end, price follows earnings, and in this context, Parus continues to believe that companies with strong growth characteristics and competitive positions will continue to grow their profits much faster than the markets, while those with weak and declining balance sheets will underperform. As the economy slows, these fundamentals become more important, which we expect to be true in 2024.

Parus invests over a cycle, so while last year was difficult, Parus continues to focus on longer-term performance.
